

Growing Momentum

Across Canada, interest in Basic Income continues to grow. Examples include:

- Senate legislation proposing a national Basic Income framework
- Murdered and Missing Indigenous Women and Girls report calls for a Guaranteed Livable Income
- Support from policy leaders, community organizations, researchers and municipalities
- Provincial and municipal discussions

Momentum is building—but meaningful progress will require partnerships.

Let's Row Together

Whether your organization works on housing, food security, health, education, labour, disability, climate action, Indigenous reconciliation, or another community need—

There is a place for you in this conversation

Let's explore how we can strengthen one another's work and build a more secure future for everyone.

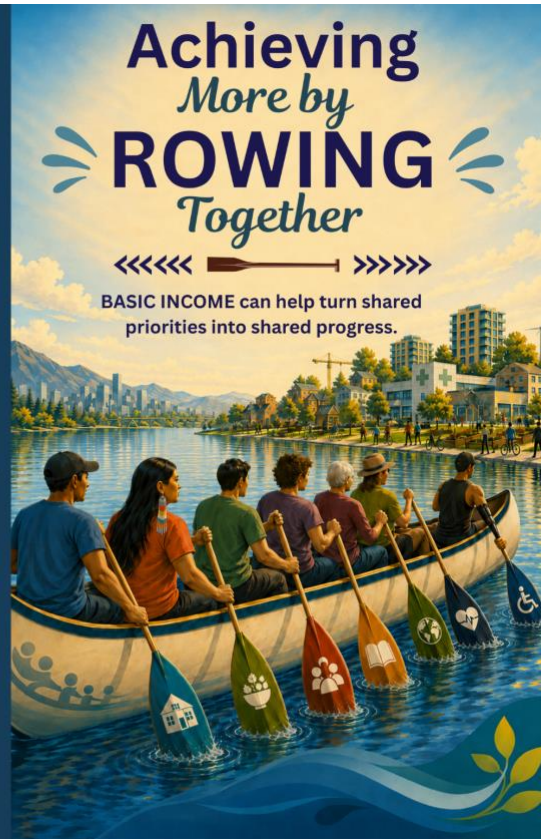

A basic income means that everyone's basic needs are met in a dignified and sustainable way.

BASIC INCOME can help turn shared priorities into shared progress.

Canadians want communities where everyone has the opportunity to live with dignity, contribute, and thrive. Yet rising living costs, housing insecurity, food insecurity, and growing inequality are making that future harder to achieve. Organizations work hard to address these challenges—but too often we're rowing in separate boats. Imagine what we could accomplish if we rowed together. Basic Income is one practical, evidence-informed policy that can help strengthen many of the goals we already share.

Why We're Building Partnerships

No single organization can create lasting change alone. Whether your organization focuses on housing, food security, health, education, disability, labour, climate action, Indigenous reconciliation, or poverty reduction, we all benefit when we work together.

We're inviting organizations, service providers, advocates, municipalities, labour groups, community leaders, and researchers to explore how we can build stronger partnerships.

Together we can:

- Share research and knowledge
- Support one another's initiatives
- Coordinate public education
- Build stronger community relationships
- Amplify our collective voice
- Advance practical public policy

Why Basic Income?

BASIC INCOME DOESN'T REPLACE THE WORK OF OTHER ORGANIZATIONS—IT STRENGTHENS IT. RESEARCH SHOWS BASIC INCOME CAN:

Reduce Poverty

Improve Physical and Mental Health

Increase Financial Security

Support Entrepreneurship and Innovation

Strengthen Local Economies

Help People Participate More in Community Life

Provide Greater Stability during Periods of Change

When people have a stronger economic foundation, every community and organization benefits.
